There's a lot happening during a breakup. Most of it is complicated, stressful, and emotionally painful. In the middle of it all, there's the matter of trying to figure out how to find a good divorce lawyer. What is a good divorce lawyer? Here are a few guidelines to help you choose an attorney who can protect your interests well in a divorce and achieve the most favorable outcome possible.

How Should I Pick a Divorce Lawyer?

There are various approaches to identifying the best divorce lawyer Utah has available to you. You can ask a friend to refer you to a lawyer who recently did a good job in his or her divorce. You can check the attorney's client testimonials. We recommend that you do both. Start with this short list of basic questions to help you assess your needs and the lawyer(s) you're considering to represent you in your divorce:

Should I Find Divorce Lawyers for Men or Women Specifically?

Typically, it is not necessary to search for a Salt Lake City divorce lawyer for men or women exclusively, unless that is your preference. Virtually any attorney you work with in Utah will do their best job in trying to achieve a favorable outcome for you in your divorce case.

Should I Look For Divorce Lawyers Near Me?

If you do not actually need a divorce attorney that has an office very close to your home or workplace, then give yourself more options in looking for the best lawyer for your needs by widening your search radius. Prioritize getting the best possible lawyer you can find within any tolerable driving distance. Or, if your divorce case will be heard in a distant jurisdiction, you may be better off hiring a lawyer closer to the court in that area to avoid paying long-distance travel expenses for your divorce lawyer.

Would a Collaborative Divorce Be the Best Approach for My Divorce?

If you and your spouse are on good enough terms that you are both confident that you can work together cooperatively throughout your divorce process, a collaborative divorce may work well. Any experienced divorce lawyer can guide you through the legal process of a collaborative divorce. In a collaborative divorce proceeding, both spouses hire their own lawyers and they agree to work together to settle on the terms of the divorce without escalating them to the court for a decision. They commit to working together to resolve any conflicts that arise during the divorce process.

How Can I Tell if I'll Be Satisfied Working With the Lawyer I Choose?

Do your research. Check client experience reports. Talk to other lawyers you use for other purposes about good divorce attorneys in your area. Ask friends and family if any of their friends have raved about the great work their divorce lawyer did for them, and ask for the attorney's name. Ultimately, unless you've already found the ideal lawyer, it's probably wise to identify a few prospects and hire the lawyer you feel most comfortable working with among your top candidates.
