For parents who never married, dealing with a separation can be confusing. Without the process of a divorce guiding you through the resolution of questions on child custody, child support and other issues, how do you settle those matters?

All of those matters can be resolved in one unified action such as a paternity action or parentage action. For those parents who do not have the father's name on a birth certificate or who have not done a genetic test, including a paternity action along with determinations regarding child custody, visitation and child support into a comprehensive court proceeding can help answer all of those legal issues at the same time.
